The 5th Australian Accounting Hall of Fame honours Dr John Kenley, Professors Emeritus Rob Chenhall and Ken Wright

The upcoming Australian Accounting Hall of Fame will honour three distinguished accountants at its fifth Annual Awards Ceremony and Dinner. Recipients include Dr John Kenley and Professors Emeritus, Robert Chenhall and Ken Wright. These outstanding recipients have contributed to the profession through pioneering principles and practices of accounting in Australia and their substantive contributions to accounting education, research and theory. The three are:

Dr W. John Kenley (1924 - 2012) was a pioneer in the Australian standards setting community. As Australia’s first standard setter he was a proactive, guiding figure in building Australia’s reputation in accounting standard-setting worldwide. More specifically, Dr Kenley was deeply involved in and committed to the development and dissemination of accounting principles and practices which were to underpin the development, application and review of accounting standards in Australia.

Rob Chenhall, Professor of Accounting and Finance, Monash University, Australia, has a long history of contributing to management accounting research, education and practice. He has significantly advanced our knowledge of management accounting through his outstanding research. Rob has had a significant impact on junior researchers and those colleagues who have worked with him. His contributions were summed up by the late Anthony Hopwood, past Editor in Chief of Accounting, Organizations and Society: It is difficult to think of anyone else who has done more to take forward the systematic study of the organizational and wider factors that shape the design and form of accounting and control systems in organizations.

As an accounting theorist, Ken Wright, inaugural Fitzgerald Professor of Accounting in the University of Melbourne, was one of a handful of Australians who caused the international community to sit up and take notice of Australian accounting academics. During arguably a “golden age” of Australian accounting literature many of Ken’s papers were published in the world’s leading accounting journals. Ken was a highly knowledgeable and dedicated teacher and many former students occupy – or have occupied – high office in industry, government and academia here and overseas.
Join us in celebrating these champions of the profession and witness their induction into the Hall of Fame at the 2013 Australian Accounting Hall of Fame Annual Dinner & Awards Ceremony
