Allan D Barton AM

Allan Douglas Barton completed a double first class honours degree in economics and accounting at the University of Melbourne. A scholarship enabled him to pursue doctoral studies at the University of Cambridge where he formulated his view of accounting as an economic measuring system that influenced his academic writing throughout his long career. At the same time he acquired a bias towards Keynesian thought regarding the nature and roles of government. Returning to Australia he held senior academic and administrative positions at the University of Adelaide, Macquarie University and the Australian National University. During the 1970s Allan contributed extensively to the fierce debate regarding current cost accounting and the impacts of inflation on business operations. His article titled Expectations and Achievements in Income Theory, published in The Accounting Review in 1974 was subsequently reprinted and included as compulsory reading in many accounting theory programs at that time. Allan Barton is also well remembered for his landmark textbook The Anatomy of Accounting, published in 1975, which represented a major departure from the traditional approach to teaching accounting as rule-based bookkeeping. As a member of the Australian Accounting Research Foundation Research Committee and principal contractor, Allan Barton played a key role in the development of the Conceptual Framework for financial reporting, an item still on the agenda of the world's standard setting bodies. Allan Barton's academic output was prolific and maintained throughout a challenging and diverse career. His influence on the thinking of successive generations of public administrators, policymakers, academics and accountants, while less directly visible, has been equally substantial. Allan Barton excelled in his contribution to accounting education in Australia. He helped to build the foundations of the discipline in Australia and internationally. He has contributed as a true scholar to the practice of accounting and financial management, particularly in the public sector, and has influenced the lives of thousands of students in accounting. Service to the profession did not escape his attention. Allan held high office in both CPA Australia and the Accounting and Finance Association of Australia and New Zealand (AFAANZ). Due recognition came Allan Barton's way as a consequence of the commitments made over such a long period of time. He was awarded Life Membership as a Fellow of CPA Australia and Life Membership of AFAANZ. On his retirement from the Australian National University Allan Barton was given the title of Emeritus Professor. He was also appointed an Honorary Professor at the University of Sydney. His scholarly contribution over a very long period was also recognised with his election as a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia in 2007. For significant service to accounting and economics Allan Barton was made, posthumously, a Member of the Order of Australia in the General Division in February 2012.

The Australian Accounting Hall of Fame honours Allan Douglas Barton as an educator, administrator, author and scholar of the highest order.
